We include GIFs in marketing emails and team announcements. Wherever there is a message; there's a chance for GIFs. And t more than that, we've found GIFs get great results! GIFs in tweets are one of our top tips for more Twitter engagement. One of the most popular transactional emails we send to customers displays GIFs. Want to know how to create your own GIF? And know when and where to share them? We've rounded up all the best tools, tips and tricks for A+ GIF games. Take a look at the list here, and feel free to leave a comment with anything else we can add or help! In this article, we'll give you everything you need on how to start making the most impact with GIFs, including:How to create your own GIF Anywhere to find brilliant pre-made GIFsWhen using GIFs at the beginning of your marketingLet with a quick guide on some of the best tools available to create your own GIFs... How to create a GIF from video1. Gifs.comIf you want to create GIFs from YouTube videos, Instagram posts, or Vine, Gifs.com the perfect tool. With Gifs.com, all you need to do is paste the URL of the video you want to convert to a GIF, and you're all set. The app also has a great variety of editing tools, including the ability to add captions and crop images.2. Giphy GIF MakerGiphy is home to one of the largest GIF collections on the internet (more on that a little further down), but it also has some brilliant GIF creation tools. The first, GIF Maker, allows you to create GIFs directly from video files or YouTube links. To use GIF Maker, simply paste the video URL or upload the video file, and you can then create a GIF and edit it in Giphy's easy-to-use interface. With GIF Maker, you can select the dots in the video where you want to START the GIF, choose the duration, and add captions. Once you're happy with the feeling of your GIF, click 'Create GIF' and it will be added to Giphy ready shared on any social network. How to sew foto3. Giphy SlideshowSlideshow, another tool created by Giphy, lets you combine your images and GIFs to create animated GIF slideshows. To start using Slideshow, you first have to select the still image or GIF you want to use (you can combine still images and GIFs). Then, after you you uploaded, you can choose the order in which it looks in your GIF and the length of time the still image will appear in your slideshow before going to the next image.4. Gifmaker.meGifmaker.me is a great free tool that lets you create animated gifs and slideshows from images. Gifmaker has a handy 'Control Panel' that lets you customize your GIFs by changing the canvas size, transition speed, and how many times a GIF has to repeat.5.

ImgflipImgflip is similar to Gifmaker.me lets you create GIFs of multiple images and also convert videos into GIFs. Imgflip allows you to edit your GIF as well, by adding text, changing the delay and switching to image size. To export the final GIF without a watermark, you must be a Pro member. How to edit GIF6. GIF EditorGiphy's GIF Editor is a brilliant tool for editing and upgrading previous GIFs. The free product to use gives you the opportunity to add animated stickers, fun filters, and captions to your GIFs.To start editing the GIF, just select the GIF to edit by entering the URL of any GIF or Giphy link or by uploading an image file from your computer. Once your GIF is ready to be edited, you can choose to add any sticker from the Giphy library and choose from a variety of filters (such as flipping your GIF or making it black and white), before adding captions and exporting ready-made items. How to create a GIF7 screencast. CloudAppSometimes can be very useful for creating GIFs right from your computer screen. This technique is great for giving tutorials or walk-throughs on how to use the product and is also very useful for customer service. CloudApp is very useful and very simple. It allows you to take screen recordings, annotate images, record webcam videos and more – this is my entry app for GIFs. Once you install CloudApp, you can record a screencast, download it as a GIFS and even share it with the generated unique URL for each recording you make.8. RecorditSimilar to CloudApp, Recordit allows you to select parts of your screen and create GIFs in seconds. Also like the Cloud App, this is a bit of software you install to your computer (available for Windows and Mac). You can see from the GIF above how fast and easy to use.9. Sir Gifs A Lot - The fun Slack GIF app we use in BufferSir Gifs A Lot is a Slack-based app that lets you create GIFs from your webcam. Once you've connected your app to Slack, you can create a recording by simply typing /gifalot. This is one of our favorite Slack integrations and gives us a great way to have fun together. Bonus tutorial: How to create a GIF in PhotoshopCreate a GIF in Photoshop takes a little more time than the application other products we mentioned so far, but also give you the most freedom to make what you are looking for. Here is an example GIF that we created in Photoshop using the technique that we will describe below:Step 1: Load the image into PhotoshopIf Photoshopf already has a readyGIFs image sequence consisting of a series of images (or frames), and if you already have a lot of images, you want to turn into a GIF, go to Photoshop, file > Scripts > Load Files Into Stack. Then select 'Browse' and choose which files you want to include in your GIF. (P.S.GIF was created using CloudApp, mentioned above) If you don't have a ready order of imagesIf you don't have a previously created sequence of images you want to use, you can create a series of new layers inside Photoshop to act as frames in your GIF. To add a new layer to your Photoshop project, choose Layer > New > Layer.When all your layers are ready, it's time to move to Step 2 and create your animation. Step 2: Create your animationTo create a GIF, you need Timeline. The timeline will help you organize your images into flowing animations that are ready to be exported as GIFs. To start using your Timeline, click Window > Timeline.You'll then see the Timeline appear at the bottom of your screen. Next, you need to create your animation. To do this, click 'Create Frame Animation' inside your Timeline and then click the menu in the right corner of your Timeline and select 'Create Frame From Layer.'Now that all your frames are in place, it's a good idea to run the animation by pressing the Play button in the bottom left of your Timeline. If there's a frame out of place, you can drag and drop it to a new position on timeline.Step 3: Export your GIFOnce happily the way your GIF looks, it's time to export it for use on your website, social media profile, or wherever you want to share it. To export your GIF, click File > Export > Save for Web (Legacy). Now you'll see a 'Save for web' window, and this is where you can choose the type of GIF you want to create. You can see all the available options by clicking Preset. Options include GIF 32, GIF 64 and GIF 128 - you can also choose Dithered or No Dither. The number after the GIF indicates the number of colors to be included in your GIF and including Dither helps lighten the color band. Converting a video into a GIF using PhotoshopPhotoshop can also help you convert a video into a GIF by converting each video frame into a frame in Photoshop. To import video, click File > Import > Video to Layer. You will then have the option to choose how many videos you import and whether you want to pull each frame (for older GIFs, importing each other frame should be of sufficient quality). After importing the video, you can add text, captions, and editing with Photoshop and then follow Step 3 above to export the MUST-Visit GIF Website to Find the Pre-Made GIF lots of GIF resources out there; here are just some of our favorites:1. Mood Buffer BoardThere is our slightly partial opportunity for our own resource, the Mood Buffer Board. Find positive and safe GIFs to work for specific events like hello, hello, You, goodbye and more. And then share it directly from Buffer in one easy step! We're excited to share mood boards because along with our announcement that you can now share and schedule GIFs from the Buffer!2 dashboard or extension. GiphyWith just a lot of GIFs and GIFs, great search functionality and selected categories, Giphy is the gold standard of GIF.3 findings. Google image searchThe most famous place to search for anything—including GIFs—is Google. To include only GIF images in your search, navigate to image search and then use the search tool to select animated images under Type.4. TumblrTumblr is often ground zero for GIF culture and find memes tomorrow before they explode. Browse all the GIFs here, or search for a specific type of GIF using the Tumblr.5 search bar. ImgurYou never know what you'll find on Imgur, viral photos, videos, and GIF hubs that get over 150 million monthly visitors. Try your luck with a new GIF site grab bag and go viral here, or search by topic or activity. A quick note on prudence: If you or your company is in a highly regulated area or may be a little wary of using copyrighted work in your social sharing, it may be a good idea to consider the risks inherent in the use of GIFs. But don't be afraid—you can still create your own GIFs! When to use GIFs and why they are important to every marketer1. Use GIFs to show your brand personality Social media is fun —why else would we spend so much time on it? Brands that manage to remain human and share authentically can create deep and special relationships with their audience, and funny/weird/captivating GIFs can be a part of that. Who used it? Denny has built a loyal fan base with only a few out there with his social media presence, including weird but alluring GIFs like this.2. Use GIFs to show off your products to give your audience a closer look at your products? GIFs can show off the kinds of details and gestures that can attract buyers. Who used it? Marie Claire uses the GIF format to offer viewers a look at the product: these killer gladiator sandals. Gladiator Back and Sneakers Are Here to Stay: See Two of spring's Hottest Shoes pic.twitter.com/!MoN5z8Ph - Marie Claire (@marieclaire) August 16, 20153. Use GIFs to explain the process or how-toSometimes is much easier to explain something in an image than with words. For a step-by-step way, follow the process, or even a quick recipe, a GIF can be exactly what you need. Who used it? Here, the Huffington Post explains 5 ways to wear a scarf. Imagine trying this process!4. Use GIF to thank someoneSaying thanks with GIF on Twitter can give a touch of extra fun. Our own Kevan Lee shows you how in this quick video:Who uses it? Here at Buffer, we're big fans of conversations via GIF. Here's an example of a recent moment where communicating with GIF only right.@wssnr Thank you, Jay! ☺ -Mary— Buffer (@buffer) August 28, 20155. Use GIFs to create small presentations Where GIFs are too short aboard to get a real point across? I was also skeptical, until I saw some amazing mini-presentations that could be shared in this format. Who used it? For example, see how The Center for Investigative Reporting tells the whole, com <1>le story in just a few frames — and creates a curiosity to learn more. The U.S. imported about 17 million pounds of caffeine last year. Here's why: pic.twitter.com/LcmqPHeoeJ— CIR (@CIRonline) August 12, 2015Create a micro-presentation, share a mini-screen recording or even a simple cartoon to complete the main message of your tweet Who's using it: Investigative Reporting Center6. Using GIFs to tell a storyline can be very effective when you want to string multiple still images together to tell a story of movement or change over time. Who used it? When the New York Times announced a new homepage some time ago, this GIF featuring how news sites have evolved over time got a lot of stock and conversation.7. Use GIFS to play adsGot TV or print ads you want to play a little more? Transfer it into GIF form! Who used it? When Bloomberg released their breakthrough What Is Code? issue (please please read; it's amazing!); they gave viewers an innovative storytelling teaser in this GIF.8 article. Use GIFs to animate dataA really awesome way to use GIFs is to give your audience context into a piece of data or statistics through animated diagrams or graphs. Who used it? NPR uses animated GIFs to show the rise of ISIS in Iraq and Syria — far from the best-known MEMES and GIF jokes.9. Use GIF to offer peekWant to share only a small look at future products, big announcements or upcoming releases? GIF can be the perfect bite size teaser. Who used it? The 10th season of hbo football documentary series Hard Knocks focuses on the Houston Texans, who tweeted a peek recently. Oh hey, #HardKnocks. More come tonight at 9 p.m. CT @HBO @NFLFilms pic.twitter.com/zWs0Bt!MoF - Houston Texans (@HoustonTexans) August 25, 201510. Use GIFS to highlight your corporate culture Peek inside your company: Who you are, what you look like, what makes you laugh and what you do every day at work. GIFs can be a fun and light way to share a bit of your corporate culture and bring your fans closer to you. Who used it? Wistia did a great job of personality and fun into everything they share on social media. In this example, they use fun and friendly GIFs to introduce some teammates and pave the way for some great networks.#MozCon: say hello to @ezrafishman & @notalyce if you see it! Join us @ @StJohnsSeattle tonight: 🎉🎉 WISTIA (@wistia) July 14, 2014Over 2014Over youGIFs is a fun area to explore, and I hope you find this guide useful. It feels like we still have a ton to learn about GIF making as well, and I want to learn from you here. How do you use GIFs in your marketing or social media? What's your favorite GIF of all time? It would be great to hear all of that in the comments! Picture: Michael Shillinburg Shillinburg
